basis of action.

Evidence predicts that industrial activity will bring about the physical destruction of industrial civilization within 20 years; with a perfect storm of water, food and energy crisis's due to devastate humanity within 15 years.

Sources: include The Pentagon, KPMG, NASA funded mathematical models, the United Nations and the UK Government Office of Science.

Preventing destructive industrial development and activity, is the most direct and necessary mechanism to resolve climate change; as industrial business is primarily responsible for causing environmental devastation or contamination; and the proprietors, investors and directors complicit, can be traced, identified and charged.

An existing law within the Rome Statue of the International Criminal Court, can prevent this destruction. It is a Prevention of Genocide definition, Article 6, definition c; coupled with Article 30, that limits the requirement of 'intent' to deliberately inflict harm; as knowledge of their activity creating a circumstance and consequence.

Prevention of climate change can therefore, be achieved by constructing a global legal case against each individual natural person [Article 25] in the world, who has intentionally progressed climate change through industrial activity since 2002 [Article 24]; by applying existing criminal liability to those who have deliberately advanced environmental destruction or pollution, that is 'calculated' [element 3] by extensive scientific evidence, to inflict conditions of life upon people that will bring about the physical destruction of national groups.

Victory World determines that the law of genocide can define all environmentally harmful industrial activity as “Deliberately inflicting on a national group, conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part;” as “acts committed with ‘intent’ to destroy, in whole or in part”, [Article 6, definition C] where the mental element of ‘intent’ [Article 30] is defined as “the person means to engage in the conduct; and has knowledge as awareness that a circumstance exists or that a consequence will occur in the ordinary course of events.”

This clear definition eliminates the common assumption that the decision-making perpetrator’s ‘intent’ to commit systematic destruction requires malice. Pursuit of profit, economic advantage, power or disinterest could all satisfy the evidence of ‘intent’, if aware that conditions of harm created, will inflict a destructive circumstance and consequence.

 Article 9 refers to Elements of the Crime text, for the appropriate requirement of intent to be decided by the court on a case by case basis.

 Article 21.b states that all appropriate, applicable treaties & the principles & rules of international law can also be applied by the court.

Evidence that the conduct took place in the context of a manifest or emerging pattern of similar conduct directed against the group [element 5], assimilates with the nature of industrial, corporate and government, planning, financing, licensing or construction, as statements and orders are issued to deliberately and manifestly attempt to progress industrial activity.

Measures to protect the safety, physical and psychological well-being, dignity and privacy of victims and witnesses [Article 68], allows the court to order a halt to industrial developments, due to cause immediate harm.

Those responsible facilitate the crime with a purpose to aid, abet, provide means for its commission, otherwise assist or in any other way contribute to the attempted commission of the crime". [Article 25.f] It is reasonable to assume and possible to evidence, that relevant decision-makers are aware of the scientific communities calculation of the physical destruction their industrial activity will cause; and meant to engage in the conduct [Article 30.2.a], in pursuit of other priorities; against both directly affected victim groups and the general population.

Corporate and independent decision makers are not relieved of liability due to acts committed pursuant to a government order. [Article 33] Government or state official decision makers are not exempt from criminal liability due to their official capacity. [Article 28] Therefore, every individual natural person complicit in advancing the crime, is liable without protection of state, corporations or private persons of influence.

The International Criminal Court can assume jurisdiction at it's own discretion, to investigate and prosecute; where the national judicial systems are obstructing justice as unable or unwilling to genuinely carry out the investigation or prosecution; [Article 17] as will be evidenced by local judicial cases or investigations limited.

Jurisdiction also applies where the individuals responsible were tried in a national court but shielded from explicit criminal responsibility or court proceedings were not conducted independently or impartially; or if unjustified delays were inconsistent with an intent to bring the person responsible to justice. [Article 20].

prevention, penalties, wealth redistribution.

The Victory World agenda can change the minds of those who order, solicit or induce [Article 25.3.b] the commission of harmful activity; and limit future decision-makers to sustainable, environmentally sound, industrial activity. Penalties can include imprisonment up to 30 years or life, a fine or a forfeiture of value derived. [Article 77].

If perpetrators completely and voluntarily abandon the effort to commit the crime or otherwise prevent the completion of the crime, they shall not be liable for punishment. [Article 25.f] If the individuals responsible commence execution with a substantial step and without such withdrawal, then they remain criminal liable regardless of whether the crime does not occur due to circumstances independent to that persons intention.

The courts ability to impose ‘a forfeiture of proceeds, property and assets derived directly or indirectly from the crimes, [Article 77.2.b] provides a tool for global wealth redistribution. Any derived benefits assumed such as inheritances, can be traced, secured and re-directed by the court to provide reparation for the crime. This penalty holds beneficiaries financially accountable, even if they’re not directly complicit in any criminal liability.

The Court may make an order directly against a convicted person specifying appropriate reparations to, or in respect of, victims, including restitution, compensation and rehabilitation; to be held in trust, where the court will determine principles for the scope and extent of any damage, loss and injury to, or in respect of, victims. [Article 75]; which won’t prejudice the rights of victims under national or international law. State parties shall effect to fines or forfeitures ordered by the court by recovering the value of the proceeds, property or assets. [Article 109] the court.

Currently, the Victory World case submissions can and will be made immediately, to the current prosecutors office within the existing structure of the International Criminal Court, with case priority sought due to the urgency provided by the preventative nature of the law, allowing for it's intended ability to prevent the crime.

The 'International Criminal Court of Sustainability' proposition.

This new court has been proposed to the United Nations as an extension of the International Criminal Court on August 6th, 2014, by Miriam Clements. This document is also submitted to the Assembly of State Parties Bureau [Article 112.3]; and other relevant bureau's and international leaders.

Convening a special and independent court for the purpose of preventing climate change through the proposed application of this law, would allow a large caseload of environmental destruction cases to be investigated with speed and eliminate the conflict otherwise due by competing against the backlog of existing ICC cases relevant to other crimes

The context for the ICC Rome Statue, refers to our need for "consciousness" with regards to the "delicate mosaic" of "common bonds", "cultures" & "shared heritage", "that may be shattered at any time". The context for a special court convened as the 'International Criminal Court of Sustainability', would be focused on cases applicable to "widespread, long-term or severe damage to the natural environment".

interpretation of victims extended.

The Rome Statute text does not limit the definition of 'national groups' as victims, to only 'human' groups; yet, the Elements of the Crime text, referenced in Article 9 for the purpose of assisting the court with interpretation and application, provides element 1 and 2 to limit the definition of 'national groups' to 'one or more persons'. Amendments to The Elements of the Crime text, may be proposed by any state party, the judges in absolute majority or by the prosecutor [Article 9, 2.].

Therefore, the Victory World cases will argue that at this unique juncture in history, where the genocide of other species groups will inflict unsustainable conditions of life upon all life, including the survival of humanity; that the broader interpretation of 'national group' to include direct harm to animal, pollinator and sea life groups, is in itself valuable, necessary and appropriate; where direct harm to humans has not been explicitly evidenced, but such destruction will impact the wider ecosystem, subsequently accelerating climate change.

This will be a secondary argument to the primary case profile which already legally recognizes that devastation of animal, pollinator and sea life impacts the cumulative physical destruction of national human groups.

On August 1st, 2014, Miriam Clements proposed an amendment to Elements of the Crime that will remove the 'group' definition limitation to 'human' group, as extended by this separate text, to allow a core statute interpretation that will protect all groups and seeks support for this amendment from state parties, the judges, the prosecutor; NGO's, leaders and public figures of influence.

evidence submission.

The Victory World open-source case collaboration will provide "basis of information" submissions to the existing ICC or the International Criminal Court of Sustainability. Upon receipt the Prosecutor's office may initiate investigations; will analyze the seriousness of the information received. [Article 15.1, 15.2] and may seek additional information from the state, intergovernmental, non governmental organizations & other reliable sources [Article 15.2]. This constitutes a preliminary investigation to assess the request for a formal investigation.

The individuals accused can provide [Article 19] "Challenges to the jurisdiction of the court or admissibility of a Case".

Upon receipt of the accused formal right of reply, [Article 19.3], then the authors, supporters and victims relevant to the basis of information may submit responding observations, to further validate the need for a trial and evidence guilt.

The prosecutor may conclude a reasonable basis exists to proceed with an investigation & request the authorization of the Pre-Trial Chamber judges, [Article 15.3] to commence a formal investigation.

The prosecutor would notify all state parties to the treaty, of the investigation. [Article 18.1] States can request a 6 month deferral within one month of notification, on the basis of conducting their own investigation. [Article 18.2] The prosecutor can agree to defer or the pre-trial chamber can instruct the ICC investigation to proceed regardless of the attempted intervention, in order to protect witnesses, preserve the integrity of evidence & act in a timely manner if the urgency is required. [Article 18.6] Based on the urgency of the climate change, investigation delays should be avoided.

A state shall not be discharged from its obligations whilst a party to the statute, due to a future withdrawal [Article 127.2] evidence & dialogue in perpetuity.

The preliminary examination may conclude that the information submitted does not constitute a reasonable basis for an investigation & the prosecutor shall inform those who provided the information. [Article 15. (6.)]

If the investigation is not approved, further information based on new facts or evidence, can be provided for renewed consideration of an investigation at any time [Article 15.6]. Effectively this evidence submission begins a dialogue in perpetuity [Article 53.4.], as the Prosecutor may request to review the decision if satisfied that new facts have arisen, which negate the basis on which the case was previously found inadmissible” [Article 19. (10.)]

Importantly, this action collates and preserves ultimate access at a future time, to the financial value derived from the industrial activity, that may be redistributed to the broader population as reparation for harm caused.

The "basis of information" will be submitted without lodging a 'prevention of genocide' case directly with national courts; with the argument that evidence within other existing international legal violations, which are laws that may be applied relevant by the court [Article 21.1.b], already demonstrate obstruction of justice by the national courts, especially if the national governments have veto right to alter or reverse decisions of the court.

It is unreasonable to attempt to elevate these already obstructed crimes, to the graver charge of Genocide and expect that the government or judicial officials, who are complicit in committing the crime themselves, would agree to investigate their own actions. However, evidence of an 'obstructed request', from the public prosecutor to investigate a genocide charge, would satisfy the basis for transferring jurisdiction over the crime to the ICC.

At any time after the initiation of an investigation, the Pre-Trial Chamber shall issue a warrant of arrest for a person, to ensure the person's appearance at trial; to ensure they do not obstruct or endanger the investigation or court proceedings and where applicable, to prevent the person from continuing with the commission of that crime or a related crime, which is within the jurisdiction of the court and arises out of the same circumstances; [Article 58] otherwise the court may issue a summons to appear with or without restriction of liberty, if the summons is sufficient to ensure the person's appearance.

State Parties to the Rome Statute are under agreement to take immediate steps to arrest the person in question [Article 59] and transport them to transact their extradition [Article 89.3 / 102.b] or surrender [Article 89 / 90 / 102.a].

The Pre-Trial Chamber shall, on the basis of the hearing, determine whether there is sufficient evidence to establish substantial grounds to believe that the person committed each of the crimes charged and based on such determination will confirm those charges and commit the person to a trial chamber for a trial [Article 61.7].

It may otherwise adjourn the hearing and request further evidence and investigation, or amend the charge to establish a different crime, or it may decline the charges determining insufficient evidence [Article 61.7. b. c.].

If charges are confirmed by the Pre-Trial Chamber, then the ICC president constitutes a trial chamber [Article 61.11] to be held in public and any international location can be established for specific ICCoS trials to proceed.

VICTORY WORLD campaign an open source case compilation.

Together, individuals world-wide will establish an international legal precedence that will prevent industrial developments from contaminating the natural resources that sustain life.

A legal campaign of international concern provides a platform for constructive collaboration across the world, between communities, companies, ngo's, groups, lawyers, scientists, creative's, publicists, public figures and conscious individuals.

Compilation of comprehensive evidence against individuals causing the environmental destruction that accelerates climate change will record both the perpetrators of the crime and the beneficiaries of the financial value derived; with the opportunity for the courts to order forfeiture of this value, at a future time.

The campaign can advance with or without political or judicial will, as evidence will provide future generations and governance with a comprehensive basis upon which to take action. If the current proprietors of world power and state judicial systems, deny it's immediate application, then they imply their own personal future complicit liability, in aiding the crimes.

The urgent cases of Belo Monte and Tapajos can establish this legal precedent. The profile establishing Context for the Crime online is: <http://www.roarsoar.com/#!/victory-amazon-action/cjyt> [column 2]

The Amazon rainforest ecosystem of Brazil, supports 20% of the world's oxygen and fresh water supply. Large hydrodams already completed in Brazil, like the Jirau and Tucuri dams, had the equivalent environmental effect of a nuclear bomb devastation. The Jirau dam left a tragic aftermath amongst the local population and the Tucuri dam measures equivalent carbon & methane emissions to the levels emitted by the entire city of Sao Paulo, the world's 8th largest city.

Nelson Mandela dedicated 10 years of his recent work to the World Commission of Dams, where he is quoted as stating "hydrodams are the worlds greatest threat to sustainability".

The contamination of this river based ecosystem with hundreds of hydrodrams planned to generate energy, billion dollar contracts and a strong GDP; will according to extensive scientific evidence, inflict unsustainable conditions of life upon humanities general population and the direct victim groups of the Amazon; accelerating climate change.
